Jan A.P. Kaczmarek

Jan A. P. Kaczmarek is a composer with a tremendous international reputation that continues to grow. As a successful recording artist and touring musician, Jan turned to composing film scores as his primary occupation. Jan's first success in the United States came in theatre. After composing striking scores for productions at Chicago's Goodman Theatre and Los Angeles' Mark Taper Forum, Jan won an Obie and a Drama Desk Award for his music for the New York Shakespeare Festival's 1992 production of John Ford's "Tis Pity She's A Whore," directed by JoAnne Akalaitis, starring Val Kilmer and Jeanne Tripplehorn. Newsday wrote that Jan's score "undulates with hypnotic force that gets under your skin," while Frank Rich of the New York Times found it worthy of the films of Bernardo Bertolucci and Luchino Visconti. Educated as a lawyer, he abandoned his planned career as a diplomat, for political reasons, to write music in order to finally gain freedom of expression. First he composed for the highly politicized underground theatre, and then for a mini-orchestra of his own creation, "The Orchestra of the Eighth Day". The major turning point in his life, he says, was a period of intense study with avant-garde theatre director, Jerzy Grotowski. "Playing and composing was like a religion for me," Kaczmarek explains, "and then it became a profession."

"The Orchestra of the Eighth Day" began touring Europe in the late 1970's and to date, has completed eighteen major tours. They appeared at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in London, the VPRO Radio International Contemporary Music Festival in Amsterdam, the Venice Biennale, and the International Music Festival in Karlovy Vary, Czechoslovakia, where Jan won the Golden Spring Prize for the Best Composition. He is a five-time winner in Jazz Forum's Jazz Top Poll. At the end of the Orchestra's first American tour in 1982, Kaczmarek recorded his debut album, Music for the End, for the Chicago-based major independent Flying Fish Records. Jan returned to America in 1989 to find a label for his latest composition for the Orchestra.

Jan stayed in the United States where he expanded his horizons by composing for theatre as he had already done in Poland with great success, capped by two prestigious New York theatre awards in 1992. Having also composed music for films in Poland, he focused his attention to that medium, achieving recognition as a film composer with scores to such films as "Total Eclipse", "Bliss", "Washington Square", "Aimée & Jaguar", "The Third Miracle", "Lost Souls", "Edges of the Lord", "Quo Vadis" and Adrian Lyne's "Unfaithful." In February 2005, Jan won his first Oscar for Best Original Score on Marc Forster's highly acclaimed film, "Finding Neverland."

J.A.P.K. also won The National Review Board's award for Best Score of the Year, and was nominated for both a Golden Globe and BAFTA's Anthony Asquith Award for Achievement in Film Music. In addition to his work in films, Jan was commissioned to write two symphonic and choral pieces for two important national occasions in Poland. "Cantata for Freedom" (2005) to celebrate 25th anniversary of Solidarity movement, and oratorio "1956" (2006) to commemorate 50th anniversary of bloody uprising against totalitarian government in Poznan, Poland. Both premiers were broadcast live on national television.

In 2007 Jan composed the score to "Evening," a drama directed by Lajos Koltaj, and the multi-national television series production of "War and Peace". In early July, Jan recorded the music to Janusz Kaminski's "Hania", and the music to Thomas McCarthy's "The Visitor". In 2008-2009 Jan composed score to "War and Peace", "Passchandealle", "The Karamazov Brothers", "The Courageous Heart of Irena Sender", "City Island", "Get Low", "Hachi" and "Leonie".

Jan is also setting up an Institute inspired by the Sundance Institute, in his home country of Poland, as a European center for development of new work in the areas of film, theatre, music and new media. It is anticipated that Rozbitek will begin accepting students in 2011.

Oliver Kranz

When I was twelve years old I got enthusiastic about the „Star War's“ soundtrack. Since then John William's music has always accompanied me. I could not get rid of the fascination for cinema and especially fantasy movies anymore. When I was 15 years old I got my first electric guitar - because my grandfather, who was a piano teacher, was too strict for me (which was of course more of an excuse not to learn to play the piano) and besides people preferred to become a rock star at that time. Later, I was infuriated about the fact, that I did not take piano lessons right away. After graduating I went off to Munich to study guitar with H.G. Rausch. Piano lessons were of course a minor subject. ;)

After that I returned to Siegen to a media agency to sound the depth of my skills as a composer for jingles in both commercials and radio. In 1994 I got my first contract for a small ZDF special with Helmut Zierl. From that point on I focussed more and more on soundtracks. With lots of luck but also hard work, sweat and tears I kept going...A dream came true for me...
